Sharm El-Sheikh

Sharm El-Sheikh is an Egyptian tourist city, located at the confluence of the Gulfs of Aqaba and Suez on the Red Sea coast. It covers an area of 480 km², and it is the largest city in South Sinai. The city includes tourist resorts frequented by visitors from all over the world, and it is famous for being one of the international diving centers that attract amateurs and professionals of this sport, and among its most important areas are Ras Nasrani, Ras Um Sid, Ras Jamila, Ras Kanisah, Sharm El Maya, Nakhlet al-Tabal in addition to the Ras Muhammad Reserve which is located south of it and the Nabq Reserve between it and Dahab, and Naama Bay at the junction of the continents of Asia and Africa, and contains more than 200 hotels and resorts other than restaurants, cafes, commercial markets and entertainment cities.

Sharm el-Sheikh was built in 1968 and is known as the City of Peace. Since that date, the city has developed rapidly until it has become one of the most famous tourist cities in Sinai and the world, and it is considered one of the four most beautiful cities in the world according to the BBC classification for the year 2005. The transformation of the city also led to modern systems in architecture, entertainment, safety and hotel service to qualify it to win an award organized UNESCO for selecting it among the five best cities of peace in the world out of 400 global cities.
